The Touches that Matter

You'll sense something very different at Clairidge House nursing and rehabilitation center. The smallest of things can convey it; a touch, a smile, a hug. It's something you'll notice immediately because our staff and volunteer workers know the importance of individualized care and familiar faces. We want you to know you are giving your parent, sibling or friend into the hands of someone who will treat them like family.

We also want to assure you we are caring for the whole person. Through social interaction and activities, as well as continued involvement in community and family, we help residents to feel both emotionally and medically secure.

A Welcome Home

All Clairidge House residents are encouraged to progress to their highest level of independence. Continued interaction with staff, volunteers, family and friends are the touches of home that make this possible. Clairidge House residents are encouraged to accept visits from family or friends any time, day or night.

With these small but significant touches all around you, your entire family can and will continue to feel good about choosing Clairidge House. Each of us plans to do our very best to welcome your family member.
